

Stage to Shelf:
Grammys
Merch That Rocks!

Choose your campaign objective

1. Based on the information in the campaign brief, choose the objective for your social media marketing campaign. [Note: delete the options that you do not choose. Be sure to pick only one objective for this campaign]
 - a. Drive targeted traffic to Grammy.com with messaging designed to inspire action.
1. Write 1–2 sentences explaining why your selected goal best supports the campaign's objective to increase merchandise sales.

Driving targeted traffic to Grammy.com by action-inspiring messaging takes the post-ceremony spike in visitors and converts them into customers who make transactions. Since the current issue at hand for the Grammys is low conversion rather than low traffic, focusing on call-to-action methods helps alleviate that problem more directly than an awareness-only goal would.

Targeting Criteria:

1. Age 18–24, college student, lives in or near a major city
2. Active on TikTok, Instagram, and Twitter/X
3. Follows fashion influencers, musicians, and entertainment micro-celebs
4. Interested in building a personal brand or entering the entertainment/media industry
5. Drawn to affordable versions of celebrity fashion and style
6. Engages with award shows and live events in real time (posting reactions, going live)
7. Follows and participates in TikTok trends and viral challenges
8. Posts frequently about her own life and style online, seeking likes and engagement

Justify how your targeting criteria supports the campaign objective

In 4–5 sentences, justify how your targeting criteria will help you achieve your campaign objective. Include your reasoning for the key demographics, interests, behaviors, and any other factors you chose.

Targeting 18–24 year old college students on TikTok, Instagram, and Twitter/X reaches the people most likely to see and act on Grammy content right after the ceremony. They want affordable ways to copy celebrity style and are building their own online presence, so merch that lets them show off a red carpet look fits what they already want. They also watch award shows live and follow trends, so quick, urgent messaging works better on them than slow content focused on developing brand. They also post about themselves constantly, so a good purchase can easily become free promotion of sorts when they share it. This all aligns with the goal of driving fast traffic to Grammy.com that turns into sales within the 2–3 week period.

Choose social media channels & ad type(s)

1. Based on the information in the campaign brief, choose 2–3 social media channels and at least one ad type you'll use to reach your audience. Note: you can choose more than one ad type for each channel.

TikTok: Video ads and custom branded filters/effects

Instagram: Stories, Reels

X (Twitter): Sponsored posts and hashtag trend placements

1. In 4–5 sentences, justify your channel selections and ad type choices based on your target audience and campaign objective

TikTok fits Aaliyah best since she follows trends and viral challenges there, and video ads with custom branded filters let her interact with merch in a way that feels normal for the app. Instagram Reels and Stories work because she already posts fit-checks and style content there, so ads in that format blend into her regular scrolling. X is useful for engagement during and right after the ceremony, since sponsored posts and hashtag trend placements reach her while she reacts live to award shows and follows red carpet moments as they happen. This spread also matches the campaign's short window as these platforms can drive sudden, trend-based messaging fast.

LinkedIn Post – Submission (NOT A LEVELUP)

I just finished a project simulating a paid social media campaign for the Grammy Awards. This involved building around driving post-ceremony traffic to merchandise sales. I picked a target objective, created a customer persona and targeting criteria, and chose ad channels and formats to match how that audience behaves online.

The biggest thing I learned is how much a campaign's success depends on matching the platform and format to the audience, not just picking channels because they're popular. An audience that is driven by trends needs urgency and specific (depending on scenario) content, which changes what channels and ad types fit.

It was a great learning opportunity to think through paid social strategy from the initial objective to audience to execution.